

What do I bring with me?

New, beginning 2010/2011 – Don't forget your sheets OR sleeping bag! We no longer supply sheets at the yurt but there are still plenty of blankets & pillows.

Clothing

Wicking undergarments

Several layers for your top and bottom (synthetic is the way to go here, wet cotton is no fun)

Wind and water blocking outer layer

Socks, socks, socks

Two pair of gloves

Hat (two would be better)

Sunglasses or goggles

Slippers or such to wear around yurt

Gaiters

Gear

Skis, boots and poles or snowshoes (Duh!)

Climbing skins and wax (if needed)

Backpack for all these goodies

Headlamp (and how about another little flashlight for backup, remember Murphy's Law)

Pocketknife or Leatherman

Matches and lighter

Sunscreen and lip balm

Compass and maps

Water bottles

First aid Kit, for you and your gear (and on the seventh day God made duct tape)

Toilet paper, toothbrush, and all that kind of stuff

If you are more adventurous and plan to do some serious skiing away from the yurt, you know to bring your shovel, probe, and other extended survival gear.

Food and Beverages

We do our best to keep the yurt well stocked with many food items including salt & pepper, other assorted spices, flour, coffee creamer or dry milk, sugar, cooking oil, hot chocolate, rice, oatmeal, noodles and other assorted goods. Please remember that we restock these supplies frequently as possible but cannot guaranty any one item's availability.

Other suggestions include:

Pasta meals are yummy and pack well

Dried fruits and nuts

Oatmeal, granola bars, fruit, bagels and such make quick and satisfying breakfasts.

Those dry drink mixes make for a nice change of pace.

Coffee, tea or hot chocolate mix

Etc, etc.

Things you don't need to lug along

Other supplies stocked at the yurt for your enjoyment include: dish and hand soap, TP, dishtowels and pot scrubbers, pots, pans, dishes and silverware, wine glasses, mugs, some books and games, pillows and plenty of blankets, including down comforters.
